Editorial

It had been the "fond hope" of many of the Alumnæ, that an Endowment campaign would be launched this year, an Endowment being the most desirable and necessary thing now for the further development and progress of our Alma Mater. Much thought was given to it, plans were worked out, and until recently, every thing seemed to be in favor of the movement. The uncertain civic and financial conditions, due to the present war, finally convinced the promoters, that it would be a perilous undertaking to launch the campaign with a possibility of its proving a failure, and for that reason, Mrs. Chalenor, President of the Alumnæ Association, and Mrs. Felter, Chairman of the New York Chapter, met the Board of Trustees on May 25th, in the Girls' Parlor, at which time the matter was openly discussed. The following report was sent by Dr. Fraser, President of the Board of Trustees, to Mrs. Chalenor:

"All of us were deeply impressed by the representations made by you and Mrs. Felter. I believe we all heartily agreed with you, too, as to the improvements needed and the desirability of the Endowment. But we also agreed with you that it would be better not to attempt to begin a campaign for an Endowment, while the country is so unsettled and anxious. But I believe the Board will be watchful for a suitable time, and when it comes, they will put all their influence and power into the effort.

"It was agreed among us that I should express to you the pleasure the gentlemen felt in the zeal of the Alumnæ and in the enterprise and ardor they will lend to the movement for better things."

The athletic development of the School was one the Alumnæ representatives felt most urgent, as the lack of grounds and out-door life is the greatest source of complaint against the School. The purchase of property back of the School, thus giving basket-ball and more tennis grounds, and the development of the farm were discussed. An attractive tea room at the farm, to which the teachers and girls could go for their Monday holiday and leisure afternoon hours, having automobile service at a nominal fare, was recommended as a restful and luxurious innovation, which would prove a great drawing card to the School. The golf links, under those conditions, would become immediately popular. The Board of Trustees was extremely courteous and enthusiastic, and we confidently feel that the desired improvements will be made as soon as practicable.

It would be a source of gratification to the Alumnæ to see a stronger community spirit developed, more active interest on the part of the towns-people in the affairs and development of the School, and likewise of the Faculty and School in the social, civic, and religious life of the City. This will be a powerful factor in the securing of the Endowment, which will help in giving to the renowned Valley of Virginia a class "A" college for its young womanhood.

Proceedings

MAY TWENTY-SIXTH, NINETEEN SEVENTEEN

The twenty-third annual business meeting of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association was held Saturday morning, May 26, 1917, in the Girls' Parlor of the Seminary. The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Chalenor, and Mrs. McCormick offered the opening prayer.

A bunch of flowers sent by Miss Weimar was presented to the Association. This message of our former Principal was most heartily appreciated.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Miss Janet Woods is the Recording Secretary—Mrs. Howison, who was elected last year, having resigned during the winter.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Members of the Alumnæ Association:

About two hundred and fifty letters and seventy-five postals have been sent out since August first. Some were answered and others never heard from.

Much time was given to the organization of the Atlanta Chapter, which so far promises to be a success, having nineteen members, and more who will join in the fall. Much thought was given to the Endowment Fund plans, letters concerning which being sent to the various Chapters—one from the President of the Association to Dr. Fraser and his reply.

The President went to Birmingham to be present at the Chapter meeting there, May 9. A very beautiful luncheon, with color scheme of Mary Baldwin colors, was served at the Country Club, after which the business meeting took place. There is material for excellent work in the Birmingham Chapter and we can look for good results.

This is a busy and strenuous world we live in nowadays, and I appreciate fully the effort it requires to answer letters. However, I am going to ask the chairmen of the Chapters, officers of the Association, and individual members to whom I write, to reply as soon as possible, as it handicaps me in my efforts by their failure to respond. A postal is often all that is necessary, and I shall not be the least critical if I can get that much.

Respectfully submitted,
ELIZABETH HANGER-CHALENOR.

The Report of the Corresponding Secretary was heard, and accepted:

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

My work as Corresponding Secretary, which I undertook in January, upon the resignation of Mrs. Stephenson, has consisted entirely in the effort to secure a vice-president for each scholastic year.

To this end, I, with the help of Miss Fannie Strauss, have written ninety-seven letters to prospective vice-presidents, and as a result, thirty-eight officers have been secured and many interesting bits of news, which will be published in the Bulletin. Lists of their class mates and application blanks were sent to the vice-presidents, who revised the lists in so far as they were able and tried to secure new members for the Association.

Miss Laura Davis, Vice-President for 1914, has sent in the most favorable report, for she has communicated with seventy-three of her class mates. Through no fault of hers, these communications were sent out late and as yet only five favorable answers have been received.

Many of the class lists are in a very bad condition as many corrections have been made in them from time to time. During the coming year we hope to have new copies made of all the lists from 1864 to 1917.

Respectfully submitted,
ELIZABETH A. BELL, '14.

The Auditing Committee reported the Treasurer's books correct.

The Scholarship pupil, to whom the scholarship was awarded until she finished the prescribed course at the Seminary, was forced to give up school on account of sickness. Her work was good, and her teachers spoke of her in a most complimentary way. A note from Miss Wilson was read at the meeting.

The Publication Committee reported six hundred Bulletins printed in 1916, and several supplies of stationery, application blanks, reunion cards, and membership certificates.

Chapter Reports

STAUNTON CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Staunton Chapter, Mrs. Laura Wise-Dechert, resigned because of her change of residence, and we are sorry to lose this interested member of our Chapter.

Three meetings were held—September, November, and February. A social meeting was held on “Baldwin Day,” which was well attended. An interesting programme was arranged for the November and February meetings.

It had been planned to have a benefit programme at the New Theatre, to raise money for the Scholarship Fund, but time and circumstances proved unfavorable to have such this spring, and it was postponed until early fall.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

The Washington Chapter held one business meeting during the year, and a lovely “At Home” was given by our Chairman, Mrs. Trimble, in honor of Mrs. Liby Alby-Bull, a former pupil of M. B. S., but now a missionary in Korea. Mrs. Bull spoke of her dear old alma mater with great pride, and how each year the M. B. S. School in Korea was helped by the dear old one at home.

We read letters from Mrs. Chalenor and Dr. Fraser in reference to an Endowment Fund. We would love to show our loyalty by our substance, but feel as our Chapter is so young and the grief and stress of the times being upon us, we will have to wait.

Mrs. Trimble, who has been our Chairman for two years, declined to be reëlected. Miss Margaret Daniel was unanimously elected to fill the chair. Mrs. Mahood was elected as Secretary and Treasurer for another year.

We hope Miss Daniel will go as a delegate from this Chapter and carry our best wishes to the assembled Alumnæ.

Respectfully submitted,

KATHERINE DANNER-MAHOOD.

ATLANTA CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

On October fourth, in the lounge room of the Georgian Terrace, eight Mary Baldwin girls met and decided a Chapter could be organized. Many letters were sent out; some answered and others were not heard from. Another meeting was held December ninth, and was poorly attended because of many social affairs on that day.

An entertainment was given after Christmas, which netted about $18.00.

Marian Neal, Treasurer, and the Chairman, called on a number of the old girls and invited them to a meeting, held at the Piedmont Hotel, on May the second, at which Miss Higgins was present and gave a very interesting talk. There were about thirty present, some visitors, and all were most enthusiastic. Especially pleasing was the meeting of four old girls of the Class of 1871, who had not met since they parted at the Augusta Female Seminary. Their greetings and loving inquiries, and tales of school days absorbed the attention of every one.

Leila Bridges, of Class of 1890-1892, and her beautiful young daughter, and Reba Bridges, came down from Griffin to attend the meeting. Addie Perkins, of my Class, was present also.

The Atlanta Chapter has undertaken the sale of framed pictures of the Seminary as a means of securing funds for the Endowment and will greatly appreciate any orders given.

Respectfully submitted,

ELIZABETH HANGER-CHALENOR.

CHARLESTON (S. C.) CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

The Charleston Chapter met at noon, on May 12, 1917, at sixteen Lagarè street. There were present Mrs. Carrie Simonton-Alston, Mrs. Flora Wheatley-Bacot, Miss Elise McLeod, and Mrs. Holmes.

The guest of honor was Mrs. Maggie Taylor-Weller, of Staunton, Virginia, the house guest of the Chairman.

The minutes of 1916 were read. The Endowment circulars discussed. Those present paid their dues, as did the absentees, Mrs. Hortense Solomons-Cohen and Miss Helen Wickenberg.

Refreshments were then served, with Baldwin white and gold predominating.

Hoping to enlarge our membership in 1918, we send greetings and good wishes to our President and all the Alumnæ.

Respectfully submitted,

NELLIE HOTCHKISS-HOLMES, '74.

NEW YORK CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

Owing to the epidemic of infantile paralysis, the New York Chapter was unable to hold its usual meeting on Miss Baldwin's birthday, October fourth. It was therefore postponed until November thirteenth, and at that late date only a small number gathered at the Hotel Martinique. It was voted at this meeting that our Chapter should subscribe $100.00 towards the Scholarship Fund of the Association, and as soon as the difference between that amount and our bank account could be fully made up, a check for $100.00 was forwarded to the Treasurer, Miss Strauss. Part of this difference was donated at that meeting.

One of the most delightful features of the afternoon was a paper by Mrs. Roselle Mercier-Montgomery, "Reminiscences of My School Days," written in her inimitable style. Music and an afternoon tea closed the day's entertainment.

Our second meeting of the year and the fourth annual luncheon, on April twenty-first, with twenty-five members and guests present, and as usual at this luncheon we added several new members to our Chapter.

Owing to the declaration of war and the utter lack of interest in the North in anything not pertaining to Red Cross work, our attendance was not as large as usual, but all seemed genuinely glad to meet again, and there was a very evident spirit of good fellowship.

We would now have thirty-four members had not three been compelled to leave us for various reasons, but we are very proud of our thirty-one, since we have such unusual difficulties to contend with in New York, and our members are so widely distributed.

Respectfully submitted,

JANETTE BAKER-FELTER.

[We were so glad to have Mrs. Felter present at our meeting.]

KNOXVILLE CHAPTER

(The report of the Knoxville Chapter contained mostly interesting bits of news items, which are printed in the news section.)

BIRMINGHAM CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

The Birmingham Chapter had a delightful luncheon this spring at the Country Club, after which our business meeting was held.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hanger-Chalenor was our guest, having come over from Atlanta to meet with us. In her delightfully enthusiastic way she talked of the Endowment Fund. She outlined her plans for the future, and her presence was quite an inspiration to the members of our Chapter.

Reminiscences, given by the "girls" since Miss Ruth Allen's time in '79, were very much enjoyed.

The table was beautifully decorated with the M. B. S. colors. Place cards, on which the Mary Baldwin crests were painted, added to the color scheme.

At the close of the meeting $25.00 was added to our share in the Endowment Fund, making $85.00 from our Chapter.

We unite in sending our best wishes to the Alumnæ Association.

Respectfully submitted,

ROSA MUNGER-EARLE.

NORFOLK CHAPTER

Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnæ Association:

Early in June, 1916, a called meeting of the Chapter was held at the home of Mrs. Chalenor. The object of this meeting was to elect a chairman to fill the vacancy to be caused by Mrs. Chalenor's removal from Norfolk to Atlanta. By a unanimous vote Miss Kathleen Lander was elected Secretary and Treasurer, and Miss Lily Morris, Chairman.

It was with great reluctance, however, that we gave up our faithful chairman, for it was she who organized the Chapter, and to her untiring efforts we owe our existence.

At this meeting it was also decided to have a subscription card party, the proceeds to go to the Endowment Fund. The card party was given the middle of June, at the home of Mrs. Chalenor, but due to the very warm weather, it did not meet with the success we anticipated.

The first meeting of the fall was held on October fourth—Miss Baldwin's birthday—in the parlor of the Monticello Hotel. We had the pleasure of having with us on that date Mrs. Elizabeth Alby-Bull, from the Mary Baldwin School in Korea. After a discussion of business, Mrs. Bull gave us a most delightful and interesting account of her wonderful work in the far East.

Owing to the extremely cold and disagreeable weather the January meeting was postponed and a meeting called for February 25. A smaller number than usual was present, due to the inclemency of the day, so we adjourned, after a short and uneventful conference.

The third and last meeting for this session was held at the home of our Secretary, on May tenth, and was both business and social. It was the largest and best meeting we have ever had. Again Mrs. Bull was with us, and one has to know her to understand her charm. We regret we cannot continue to have her in our Chapter, but she expects to return to the East in August.

We have received three new members, and given $7.20 to the Endowment Fund. Though we are only a small Chapter, we shall strive to keep alive the interest in our Alma Mater and do all we can to help in any possible way.

Respectfully submitted,

LILY NEVILLE MORRIS.

The following memorials were read:

To Miss Margaret Terrell, '09, written by Mrs. Sarah Ellen Green-Hobbs, and read by Miss Fannie Strauss.

To Mrs. Margaret Trimble-Hanger, written and read by Mrs. Elizabeth Hanger-Chalenor.

To Mrs. Jenny Kent-Cochran, '70, written by Mrs. Nellie Hotchkiss-Holmes, and read by Miss Elizabeth Bell.

To Mrs. Hattie Strayer-Blackburn, '00, written by Mrs. Margaret Peale-Wright, and read by Mrs. Margaret Kable-Russell.

A copy of each memorial has been sent to the family of the deceased.

New Business

Moved and seconded that a note of thanks be sent to the Southeastern Freight Association for their efficient and generous help.

An appeal was made for economy in every branch of the Association; postage may be saved by the use of postals instead of letters. The Treasurer was instructed to send notices by means of printed slips in unsealed envelopes.

Moved and seconded that business meeting and banquet be held on a Friday if possible. Miss Anne Riddle is to see that change will be made.

As next year will see the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary of the Seminary, it was suggested that besides the reunion of the Class of '16-'17, the '69-'70, '79-'80, '89-'90, '99-'00, '09-'10 Classes have their reunion also. The condition of the country will decide the advisability of such in the spring.

Sunday afternoon at five o'clock was the time set for the memorial services at Miss Baldwin's grave. Mrs. A. M. Howison was to lead the services which, owing to a storm were not held.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hanger-Chalenor then gave a talk on the Endowment Fund.

Alumnæ Reception

In the evening, at eight o'clock, a reception was held in the Seminary Parlors. In the receiving line were, Miss Higgins, Mrs. Chalenor, Miss Woods, and Mrs. Russell.

The guests, Alumnæ, Faculty, Seniors, Juniors, Trustees and their wives, were then invited into the dining room, where a delightful banquet was served. The room was artistically decorated in the School colors, white and yellow. Large baskets, filled with white and yellow flowers, formed the center decorations for the tables, while sandwich baskets and candle shades of the same color further carried out the decorating scheme.

The Address of Welcome which was made by Miss Higgins, follows:

*Madam President and Members of the Mary Baldwin Seminary
Alumnæ Association, Board of Trustees and Guests:*

When one of the capable officers of the Alumnæ Association very courteously asked me to make an address of welcome on this occasion, I replied that the welcome would be hearty and cordial but the address, brief.

Many of you know that this is my first year as Principal of the School, but I feel that it is an honor and distinction to have presided even for one year over an institution of which, in the fall of 1863, amidst the roar of musketry and the sound of cannon, Miss Baldwin, in a spirit of consecration, took charge, and over which she presided with such signal success that her name is honored and revered by a noble band of matrons and maidens scattered throughout the United States and in foreign lands. Miss Weimar followed with over twenty years of efficient service, during which time the expansion of the curriculum and the material development of the School was such that the Mary Baldwin conformed to the more clearly defined requirements of modern education, and continues to hold an enviable position amongst the honored schools of the land.

When compared with the many years of service of Miss Baldwin and Miss Weimar, my one brief year seems unworthy of mention, but it has brought to me many pleasures, among which I count the delightful privilege of cordially welcoming you, one and all, to the Mary Baldwin Seminary.

To the Board of Trustees, let me say that, by right of a sacred trust, the Seminary belongs to you; therefore, you are at home, for here your wish is respected and your approval highly valued. To the members of the Alumnæ Association, and particularly to the Reunion Classes, let me say that the Seminary is yours by right of conquest; you came, you saw, and shall I say you conquered? You who represent various periods in the history of your school may recall times during which the word "conquer" may not have been used in the active voice, but you do represent the spirit and strength of a warrior in having overcome difficulties of various kinds—your very presence here tonight is proof of that conquest, and we delight in seeing you here.

To the Class of 1917 I can speak more intimately, and I rejoice tonight to see you take your place among your fellow Alumnæ. You have been a joy and support to me personally and I believe you will bring new honors to your Alma Mater. I am especially happy to greet the Juniors, you are in good company when you associate with the Seniors of 1917.

To all others, I would say the charm and delight of your presence insures you a warm welcome. May I tell you a dream that has come to me during the past few months? Do you know that just a year from now, your school will be seventy-five years old? May I see you coming back to the Mary Baldwin from the four corners of the earth, bringing your schoolmates and friends with you, to join in a celebration of all the Seminary means to you! However, I was asked to extend a welcome for tonight and not for a year from now, and if you will only make yourselves at home and be happy with us, you will insure the success of the occasion.

Mrs. Chalenor, our President, acting as Toast Mistress, said:

On rising to announce the regular toasts, I wish to thank my friends for the honor they have bestowed upon me in placing me in the chair I occupy. This is an occasion which brings us together in the common fellowship of love and loyalty to the Alma Mater. Especially dear and priceless does this great Institution seem today, as we stand face to face with the terrors of war, and realize what a great conqueror she has been and how firm a Gibraltar she stands today, facing the on-coming storm.

We, who have known the Mary Baldwin only during her palmy days, and have glided along through her avenues of learning, undisturbed in the enjoyment of her many advantages and comforts, are prone to forget that Miss Baldwin and Miss McClung, with a gloomy past to look back upon, the School not having proven a success under several men principals, and with a most foreboding future with its ominous war-clouds, shouldered the responsibility, surmounted all difficulties, and saw their efforts each year crowned with greater success.

On this festive occasion, if it were possible to gather in all who bear testimony to the greatness of Miss Baldwin, there would be an ever widening stream, starting from the icy banks of the St. Lawrence, through the green hills and valleys of New England, on down the Hudson, through the comely vales of Pennsylvania to the Potomac, thence to the Blue Ridge—there to be joined by the on-coming stream from the James and Carolinas, up through the beloved Southland from the mighty St. John and the Everglades; from the swift flowing Mississippi and bold Rockies, and the golden streams of California, they would come; far distant Korea, China, Japan, Brazil, would send their loyal few, until, gathered within the portals of this dear old School, there would stand a mighty throng, bringing tributes to her whose name the School now bears, and to her worthy successor, Miss Weimar, whose presence we so much desired on this occasion.

Just as surely, through the storm gathering over our country today, our Alma Mater will be safely piloted by her who now stands at the helm, and will speedily continue on her voyage of progression and development. Ably assisted by her splendid corps of teachers, and a most efficient and popular business manager, Miss Higgins will join her forces with those of the Board of Trustees, and the Mary Baldwin will advance.

At the close of this, Miss Higgins' first year, the Alumnæ Association wishes to congratulate her on her marked success, and express its gratification for her hearty coöperation with us in whatever we do.

“Fill high the cup with Samian wine,” and let us stand and drink to her health, long life, and success.

Miss Latané responded for the Faculty:

Madam President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

For all of us this occasion is very delightful, but for me it is also very difficult. How can I speak for the Faculty when the Faculty is made up of as many diverse and strongly marked personalities as there are persons within it? And never before have I been put in the position of having to represent men. For us all, however, I can speak to this extent: We are happy, and honored and proud to be the guests of the Alumnæ Association tonight.

This is a family gathering—Alma Mater and the children who have come home to her. Alma Mater is not a definite thing; not bricks, nor mortar, nor stately columns; not the Faculty, not even a body of honorable traditions. She is as elusive as the soul itself. But these sunny halls are her dwelling place; these traditions are her ways; and we, the Faculty are, as it were, the very members of her body. She must express herself through us. Our strength is her strength. Our weakness and limitations limit her.

Perhaps then, in this intimate family gathering, you will permit us to talk to you a little about some of our joys and sorrows. We usually conceal them. That is one of our sorrows. We are teachers, and we are not supposed to have any emotions. It really shocks the public for us to exhibit feeling as most people do.

Neither are we supposed to have interests of our own, such as other people have. I shall never forget the remark a little pupil made to me years ago, when a half-holiday was announced, "But what will the teachers do all afternoon?"

How does teaching affect us physically? Again let the children speak. Two little boys were overheard discussing a maiden aunt. One remarked, "I think she must be pretty old; don't you?" The other chivalrous little soul rejoined indignantly, "Oh! no! She just looks a little worn from teaching." A well known physician said to the mother of a young friend of mine, "Don't let your daughter go into teaching. It is the most ruinous thing a woman can do."

If such is the effect of teaching on our bodies, perhaps you think it is good for our minds. Not at all! Teachers associate constantly with inferior minds—not those necessarily of inferior quality, but those in a lower stage of development. This does not give the stimulus that comes from having to struggle to maintain your own with equals or superiors. The children look up to us as high authorities, very properly of course, and they are not usually in a position to refute our statements. Gradually we, too, come to think we know all there's any need to know. Did you ever recognize a teacher at sight? Did you ever observe a little habit of saying a last word in a discussion? Did you ever note a certain dictatorial manner? I've given you the sad reason why.

But books! Surely we have the consolations of literature. I do not know about that. They are so closely connected with our business that we may have a professional attitude toward even books, and lose the fine literary sense of the person to whom they are not business, but pure joy.

Then our work is done in isolation, that makes for narrowness. Teachers and pupils sit together in the quiet class room. Life may be far away.

Do you marvel that the joke editor of the Annual gets material sometimes? When a woman has taught for ten years and yet is warm hearted, and gracious, and broad minded, that woman has been fighting against the current for ten years, and is a heroine, although no one knows it.

These are the only sorrows we shall pour out to you at present. Listen to some of our joys.

One of them is that the profession of teaching, as a profession for women, is on a higher plane than ever before. Marriage, too, is on a higher plane, and for a curiously similar reason. There was a time when the woman who did not marry had a very helpless, dependent position—no chance to have, in the work of the world, a part that was worthy of her powers. Many women made marriages of convenience merely to escape from the blankness of life without marriage. I do not call their wisdom into question; but, I do not call that an ideal marriage which is entered into only as an escape from something worse. Today, when a woman of any character marries, it is because she deliberately chooses marriage, not because there is nothing else she can do. I fancy that husbands are as well pleased to be chosen as to be accepted with resignation.

There was also a time when there was just one profession—no, occupation—open to a lady who did not marry and wished to support herself. She might teach. There were many tragedies, for teachers, like poets, are born and not made, although training helps both. Now we are wiser, and women have found many, many things they can do for the good of their own souls and without detriment to society. The result is that, to an ever increasing extent, women teach because they choose to do it, not because it is the only thing open to them.

The fact that the teacher deliberately chooses her profession is as salutary for the school as the fact that the wife deliberately chooses marriage is gratifying to the husband.

But why! why did the teacher choose? Listen. Plato, in his ideal state, designated four classes as the guardians of society. They were soldiers, judges, clergy, teachers. Surely we find ourselves in goodly company. The modern world still agrees with Plato that these guardians of society are of such importance to society that, to embrace their value, it is not necessary to load them with property.

Again, think what this business of teaching is. Some one has summed up his college life in these words, "We took four years of our youth and devoted them, quite unconsciously, to the intellectual life and to the ethical spirit." That is less true of the secondary school than of the college, but there is a measure of truth in it for all schooling. Is it a small thing for us to take these girls in their youth and open to them the doors of language, its technique and its literature, ancient and modern, the doors of science, of music, of art, to give them glimpses of all human achievement; to set before them ideals? Their age is the awakening to life; the spring time, the time for seed sowing; and, we hold in our hands the precious grain. It is always spring time with us. We go on sowing the seed and we do not often know of the harvest.

But we sow in faith and hope. These girls are going out into life. Many of them will have broader lives, greater opportunities, far wider influence, than we ourselves have had. Others will live and die in obscurity, but what holy, tender, happy life may be theirs. We watch them with strange musings on the mystery of the future. Our joy is that we know we can help, we are helping them to the best that in them is.

O, yes! teaching pays as it goes; this living with the spring time; this business of interpreting past human achievements to the generation to come; this labor that is part of the great work of the world; and, is not always in vain. The humor of it, the pathos of it, the joys, the exasperations, are as complex as as life itself. And then, at rare times like this, you alumnæ come home to your Alma Mater, and we see a portion of the harvest and rejoice.

One final word. My colleagues in the Faculty, and those of you whom I have tried to teach, are doubtless saying, "How do you dare to idealize so shamelessly the poor performances of the common day?" My apology is only this, I should be ashamed to have ideals so low that any mortal woman could reach them.

The responses for the reunion classes were as follows.

'77. Miss Weimar sent her message in a bunch of flowers with the words :

With hearty greetings to the Class of '77 and many wishes for a happy reunion. May the pleasure of meeting the friends and school mates of years long ago, and recalling the memories of your labors and pranks at your Alma Mater, the Augusta Female Seminary, be very great and the occasion one long to be remembered.

'97-'98. Written by Miss Eugenia Bumgardner and read by Miss Abbie McFarland :

Our Toast Mistress believes in conscription, but her selection of me to greet you leads me to suppose she does not approve of the selective draft method. But since in these days of war measures and of learning to do our bits, it is not "mine to question why, but mine to make reply," I am obeying her orders.

It is a great privilege to be deputized as your hostess tonight, and I bid you thrice welcome. It is a joy to have so many of you with us and I know it is a joy to you to again behold our dear Alma Mater. What need of words of mine to welcome you, when you are returning to your own home—for such it was to all of us—whose familiar walls greet you with all the dear memories of the past. And how sweet it is to find that amid a world that is constantly changing, our Mother retains her youthful vigor and strength and beauty; that her ideals of scholarship are as broad and deep, and her ideals of character building as lofty and noble, as when she first sprung into life under the hand of that wonderful woman whose name she bears. Much that we took for granted and accepted while thoughtless school girls, we have learned to appreciate, and all of us now understand what a high privilege it was to have been educated here.

In this reunion how interesting it has been to learn what each of us has found hidden in the Pandora box of the years. And how easy it has been to forget the present and imagine ourselves school girls again. Just a sight of the old class rooms has brought back many an ancient fear. Have we not found ourselves quaking with the memory of those long-forgotten unlearned lessons? Whenever a teacher appears I find myself edging away from those of you who were "boarders," for I am sure she suspects that I am bringing you a note from the "Kable boy," whose name I've quite forgotten—as doubtless you have, too—but who happened to be playing Romeo to your Juliet.

Some of us have been re-reading the first number of the "Blue Stocking," which was launched by our class, and recalling the meetings of that editorial staff, so young, so inexperienced and so earnest. The jokes bear a great likeness to those of today, for there are no new jokes in college annuals, for there is but one subject, the Faculty, and were we to find a change it would be as great a cataclysm as if the first spring day brought with it no small boys playing the ancient game of marbles! And then those photographs! of editorial staff, of classes, of graduates, of fraternities, of athletic teams—we managed so that no one was left out. And the hours we spent in trying to look our best for the taking, and how greatly the effort is shown on the drawn countenances of some of us. And while we have gazed at ourselves, many of us, I am sure, have felt as did Stevenson when he wrote, "Oh, say could that boy have been I?" It has been very comforting to be told, "But how little you have changed, I would have known you anywhere." And our small baby has grown into a big college annual now and she holds her head very high and is very proud, as well she may be, and we feel that we have the right to "brag" because we mothered her, for she has fulfilled our fondest hopes.

And now, dear class mates, while it has been a joy indeed to greet you, I want you to promise me to return again; come back to us and bring with you as many of the "old girls" as you can. Our heart is very big and our hospitality great; we want to greet again each year at this commencement time all who have been pupils here, for thus will we keep our altar fires lighted and attest to all the world our devotion for and adoration of our beloved Alma Mater.

Let us drink to many more and larger reunions.

Miss Mary Alice Craig, '97, of Piedmont, Alabama, sent this message to her class, by telegram:

Love and best wishes to each girl this day.

'07-'08. Miss Elsie Moffett:

The friends we make in childhood—they don't amount to much;
The friends we make in middle life—they're such and such;
The friends we make in old age—their number is rather small;
But, oh! the friends we make at the Seminary—
They're the best of all.

Dr. Fraser, in his own inimitable way, gave us a most delightful little talk.

Dr. Lacy, of Winchester, and Dr. Squires, of Norfolk, added greatly to the pleasure of the evening by their interesting little speeches.

The farewell toast was given by Miss Annie Cobb, President of the Class of '17:

Madam President, Alumnæ—our friends so true,
May the best that life holds come to you;
Before we part, let's drink anew
To the Class of '17, and to you.

The Tale the Daises Told

The children run out in the daisy field and pick daises. They pluck the petals off: "He loves me, he loves me not." A lucky petal is discovered, and they are pleased: an unlucky petal is found, and they are disappointed. Finally the daisy tells the tale: "He loves me not!" In anger the flower is thrown upon the ground. Trying it again, another daisy tells her: "He loves me!" and she finishes her dance joyfully.

PATRIOTIC PAGEANT AT SEMINARY

Thursday evening, April 19, Staunton had a patriotic rally and parade. The citizens and schools took part in this, and the following account of the M. B. S. tableaux was taken from a local paper:

At the Mary Baldwin Seminary the scene on the front lawn was wonderful. Here beneath the trees, strung with electric lights of the national colors, the students of the historic old School, dressed in white and waving flags, cheered and sang with the wildest enthusiasm, both as the parade passed and long after it had gone by.

At the top of terrace, just to the right of the entrance, stood two dozen fair sailor lassies behind a large counter, in which was shown, in electric lights, the words, "Men for the Navy." These dainty recruiting officers were captained by Miss Peery.

On the left of the entrance stood a row of nineteen girls, each bearing a large banner, on which was a single letter, the whole spelling, "Men Wanted for the Army." Surely they will need no second invitation from these dainty misses who have thus bid them serve their flag.

Miss Columbia, impersonated most effectively by Miss Brenda Macrae, stood on a flag-draped platform on the center walk, surrounded by her allied nations, Russia, Belgium, England, and France, as represented by Misses Josephine Adams, Bessie Browning, Virginia Mitchell and Fan Lee.

Miss Mary Shuster as the bugler looked quite "soldier-like" and blew her trumpet with much vim and determination.

While the parade was passing, the young ladies sang patriotic airs, showing perhaps a slight favoritism for "Dixie" to an accompaniment by the M. B. S. orchestra, led by Prof. Wilmar Robert Schmidt, while across the street on the steps of the First Presbyterian Church and reaching past the corners at either end of the block were hundreds of citizens who joined in with their cheers.

Red lights burning as the parade passed, greatly enhanced the general effect of this truly brilliant scene.

And as a silent witness to this inspiring demonstration, stood, in the Seminary yard, the old chapel in which the father of the Nation's peerless leader taught his people to fear God and love their country.

Following the passing of the parade, the young ladies and the Faculty were serenaded by the Cadet Band of the Augusta Military Academy, after which they heard an inspiring address by Capt. Crayton, of the Fishburne Military School, who told them the country needed women as well as men and how they could be of service. He also asked that they use their influence on those young men "over whom they had the most authority" in getting them to enlist in the nation's service.

Reminiscences

A GLIMPSE OF THE SEMINARY IN WAR TIMES

[This article was copied from the Annals of 1893 and 1908]

In the fall of '62 Miss Baldwin opened school with thirty boarders and one hundred and twenty day pupils. How should they be provided for when flour cost twenty-five dollars a barrel, with other things in like proportion? At the beginning of the session, there was an abundance of everything to eat—kind friends had aided Miss Baldwin in her effort to obtain the winter supplies. The question then was, "How could these things be kept?"

In the war days Staunton was a center for army supplies, and therefore filled at nearly all times with the wearers of the blue and the grey. The contents of every larder must needs be well secured. Miss Baldwin had procured forty barrels of flour, but where could she put it? A quick-witted school girl solved the puzzle. A few hours labor, and the barrels of flour were no longer visible, while each room boasted a pretty round dressing table, in dainty draperies. But even with this stratagem there were not enough rooms to contain all the barrels, so the remaining flour was sewed up in a tick and made to serve duty as a bed. On hearing that the "blue-coats" were near, "the thinnest girl in school—and it is said that she was the only thin one—chalked her cheeks to a ghastly white and got into the bed of flour." During the usual search made by the Federal officers, Miss Baldwin opened the door of the darkened room, when suddenly a ghastly figure rose up in the bed, as if wakened from sleep. The startled officer backed out of the room with a murmured apology for disturbing a girl so ill. Needless to say the flour was saved, for the dainty "dressers" aroused no suspicion.

Many hands made quick work at the wood-pile whenever that dread cry, "The Yankees! the Yankees!" was heard.

At the sound, every occupation, no matter how important, was dropped, and a grand rush was made for the wood-pile. Two girls would seize upon a log of wood, an end upon each shoulder, and off they'd go to deposit it in the dark and hidden precincts of the cellar.

At another time, when the Federals were in town, the girls hid the hams in all the available places in the school room. The stoves were filled, and then a ham was placed in each desk. All was done just in the nick of time, for each girl had hardly snatched a book and settled herself at her desk, when the searching party entered. They saw only a very studious company of girls, surprisingly indifferent to their presence. What would they have thought had they discovered that many of the books were upside down? A casual glance sufficed, and as the party left the room, one of the men said that the girls didn't seem much afraid. Whereupon, a saucy miss, who overheard the remark, replied, "What's in you to be afraid of?"

The girls' efforts, however, were sometimes disastrous, as for instance, when some of them attempted to roll a barrel of sorghum up the dining room stairs, and the head come out of the barrel. "They had this consolation, however, if they could not eat that sorghum, neither could 'the Yankees.'"

During all this time the haven of refuge for the girls was "Grandmother's room." Grandmother was Miss McClung's mother, who made her home at the Seminary. Whenever the "blue-coats" were in town, sometimes as many as thirty girls could be found here. "Grandmother" would have her hands full soothing their fears, and here they would stay, until perchance Jackson and his gallant soldiers would come marching up the Valley, when away would go the "blue-coats." Then what times followed, as the girls practiced for the soireé that was always given for our own soldiers, and how their fluttering hearts beat, upon the entrance of the gallant lads in grey.

No one in telling stories of those exciting times ever forgets the cow or the cats. Only one cow was left to the Seminary, and what times the girls had in keeping her from falling into the wrong hands! Stratagems worthy of a great general were devised, for well they knew that if this one precious cow was lost, their scanty allowance of butter once a day would be gone. The cats were the mistaken gift of a kind friend. One day, while the girls were engrossed with their lessons, a small darkey appeared in the doorway, carrying a large sack and announcing, as they thought, that his mistress had sent Miss Baldwin some "cakes." To the consternation of all, when the bag was opened, cats of all sizes and colors scrambled out. The friend had heard that the Seminary was infested with mice, and had thought to do a service by sending the cats to the rescue. Provisions were too precious, however, to take in so many new boarders, so the cats were returned to the giver with thanks.

Sunshine and shadow marked that school year, but with a never-failing fund of cheerfulness the girls bore every shadow, every deprivation, and seemed to enjoy on that account every little diversion three-fold. What cared they if butter and gravey never appeared at the same meal, or if they had to drink coffee made from rye and sweetened with sorghum? What cared they if there were no two dishes alike at the dinner table, or a cut-glass goblet beside a china-mug?

The close of the war meant a great loss to the Seminary—all that remained was a large amount of Confederate money, now worthless; a few articles of second hand furniture, and several musical instruments. Some necessary articles were procured from Baltimore on credit, and as means came in, equipment was gradually added.

REMINISCENCES OF SCHOOL DAYS

Written by Mrs. Roselle Mercier-Montgomery and read by her at a meeting of the New York Chapter

I remember that when I first returned home from school my elder sister who was "out" and, therefore, immensely superior in every way, admonished me that whatever else I talked about, it must not be about school. This was crushing, in view of the fact that I was rammed, crammed, jammed full of boarding school and had nothing else to talk about. So I can remember yet my frantic efforts to make talk, feeling that this or that topic of conversation would last, say, five minutes, and when that was exhausted, wondering what would become of me. I imagine we all went through pretty much the same sort of anxieties at that period of our lives.

I remember Helen Bridges, now dead, alas!—one of the most brilliant girls whoever graduated from the Seminary and who could hold crowds of us school girls spell-bound with her talk—tell of the awful time she had when she went to Washington to visit during one of the holidays. She said she couldn't think of a thing on earth to say, and that every few minutes her aunt would make matters worse by coming along and stage-whispering into her ear, "Be animated, Helen; be animated!"

Well, I feel something like that now, only at this late date, and in this select circle, I can fall back upon boarding school—in fact, I have been asked to do so. I'm afraid you are going to suffer!

Most of you present here today cannot go back twenty-five years in your memory, and we who can, don't like to acknowledge it. We are only forced to do so by the presence of a few of our contemporaries. I wouldn't own up to it, if I could only chloroform Mrs. Felter, or—well, I won't tell on anybody else! But as it is, I am forced to confess that this coming spring will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of my leaving school, and I am beginning to show two infallible signs of age. I am beginning to say that I feel as young as I ever did, and to bewail the fact that things are not up to what they used to be. But even the pessimism of advanced old age cannot blind me to the wonderful strides made in these twenty-five years by our Alma Mater, and it is my purpose today to try to bring before you the school as it was, in order to make you fully realize and appreciate it, as it is today.

Memory is very tricky as we all know, and while I have forgotten most of the important dates in History so carefully instilled by Miss Riddle, and would be deeply embarrassed if called upon to conjugate either a French or a Latin verb, and have utterly lost the many beautiful and instructive bits of poetry committed to an unwilling memory on Saturday mornings in the office. I can recall with startling distinctness my sensations on first hearing a girl practicing her vocal lesson, with its u-be-ba-ba-be-bo-bu-u-u! I really believed, in the happy ignorance of the new girl, that some girl had gone suddenly and violently insane. But, alas! no; such was not to be, as the dime novels put it. It was not the occasional outburst of insanity, nerves, or even temper. It was to be, I soon found, the running accompaniment to all my waking hours and all my daily activities. This was owing to two reasons, namely, the vocal teacher's determined efforts to make every pupil's voice a high soprano, and to the fact that the music rooms were distributed with beautiful impartiality about the buildings among the bed rooms and recitation rooms. Today, all the practicing of every kind is done in one building, and if a contralto or mezzo voice is slain to make a high soprano holiday, the other pupils are not called upon to hear the dying wails! This was a merciful thought of Mr. King's, who has been the source of many other plans which have been carried out for the change and betterment of the school.

Twenty-five years ago the main building, conservatory, and chapel looked on the outside very much as they look today, but everything inside the building, and beyond it up the hill, has been totally changed and improved beyond all recognition. The "Brick House" has been replaced by the very modern and up-to-date "McClung Hall." "Hilltop" has been entirely remodelled and made over, from a private dwelling occupied as a home by Prof. Murray and family, with a few students' rooms up stairs, into a new and very fine building to accommodate the girls' rooms, and is as fine and impressive as the handsome new "Memorial Building" erected along side of it for the same purpose.

In the place of the little one story class rooms that ran along one of the hill terraces, there is today the very fine Academic Building, with its class rooms, music rooms, laboratory, library, and girls' parlor. I must emphasize this last as it was so badly needed in our time.

"Sky High," as it was named even before our time, has been even more modernized than the other buildings. It now contains not only a very well equipped gymnasium and swimming pool, but a very modern studio, and latest of all, a domestic science department, consisting of a scientific kitchen and a very attractive little lunch room adjoining. Mr. King showed me all these innovations last winter when I passed through Staunton. He is positively alight with enthusiasm as he decants upon the wonderful plumbing; the number of bath rooms (one to every five girls now I believe); the absolutely sanitary kitchen and pantry arrangements; and, the very complete and up-to-the-minute infirmary, presided over by a trained nurse, who has her own very complete diet kitchen.

Instead of the great bell which used to toll out the hours and half hours, there is a very complete electric bell signal system connecting the buildings; also, and wonderful to relate! the old "Covered Way" through which our shawl-draped figures used to scurry in the cold to our classes and rooms, has been transformed into a very artistic pergola! The "Back Gallery" has been subjected to a like enchantment, the old winding, wooden chapel stairs have given way to a wide flight of concrete or stone steps. It is all so wonderful to an old timer that one feels that Aladdin has been rubbing his lamp and invoked the Geni to do his bidding. It would certainly make the girls of 1916, in their very attractive rooms for two, with hardwood floors, single iron beds, and separate bureaus and closets, open their eyes if they could turn back the page of Time and look back upon us girls of 1891 and our accommodations.

Our room for instance—the one over the front door was called "Long Room." I wonder if it still is? It had one window, or rather a glass door, opening out on the little front porch; four very sizable girls occupied two wooden beds and overflowed two small bureaus. We had four chairs, two high chairs and two rockers, and one radiator that did not always radiate. This, with one small table, comprised the furnishing of our room, unless one includes the ingrain carpet, of more colors than Joseph's coat, which hid the board floor. The walls were kalsomined or white washed as nearly as I can remember, a depressing light grey. We were fortunate in having a large closet with a window in it opening on the back gallery, where we performed our ablutions—not on the gallery, but in the closet—and for this reason our room was looked upon as one of the most desirable in school, notwithstanding the fact that on frosty mornings we usually found ice in our water pitcher. Either pedometers hadn't been invented then or we hadn't one at our command, so I can't tell you how far it was to the nearest bath room, but I remember the one out of the three the school contained, which I used to frequent, was in fearful proximity to the music room and even a bath tub full of water couldn't drown the u-be-ba's. It was a fearful discouragement to cleanliness!

If we felt socially inclined we had no place to join the other girls, except to visit them in their rooms and sit on their trunks and beds after their allotted number of chairs had been filled. We had no access to newspapers or magazines of any kind, but could get romances like "Queechy," "The Wide, Wide World," and "The Lamp-Lighter," from the library and read them in our rooms.

If we wanted to have a spread we had to do it on the sly. If we attempted any cooking it was of a somewhat hazardous nature, and was surreptitiously done over the gas jet in our room. Any sudden excitement would cause the amateur chef to spread the entire menu upon the afore mentioned ingrain carpet, sadly to the detriment of both the menu and the carpet. What a contrast this is to the little room equipped with chafing dishes, etc., where the girls can have their spreads and do their cooking to their hearts content. If the element of daring and excitement is lacking that used to accompany our surreptitious attempts at the culinary art, the girls of today at least make up in comfort what they lack in adventure.

The ever present fear in our minds, and one that had a salutary restraining influence, was the fear that our secret revels might land us in the infirmary. This was the ultima thule of misery, and we used to say that it should have written over the door, "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here!" We were a healthy lot and seldom had any serious ailments, but no matter what our trouble seemed to be, the remedy prescribed was always a large dose of valerian, inelegantly dubbed by the girls, "polecat." I remember that I once wrote a facetious description of the infirmary in a composition, which told of the horrors of incarceration therein. Well; forcibly, to say the least, I touched on the fearful pictures adorning the walls—pictures of dead and gone relatives of Miss Baldwin, of death beds, of cemeteries, and other cheerful subjects. I airily described the anything—but tender—ministrations of the matron; and then, I had the agony of sitting and hearing it read aloud before Miss Baldwin and the entire Faculty and school. I think I got an extra large dose of valerian on my next visit to the infirmary.

Of course, I'm not half through. I still have at least twelve and a half years of bottled up reminiscences to unload upon you, but a warning gleam from Mrs. Felter's eye reminds me there are other numbers on the program.

After all, I find I do remember a line of Latin out of the wreckage. It is one dear Miss Strickler was especially fond of, and I only wish I could tell you whether it comes from Ovid, Virgil, or Horace—perhaps my classmate, Mrs. Felter, can—but it applies to us all when we remember our school days. It is, "Hale olim meminisse juvabit," and means, "These things we will rejoice to remember in after days."

NEWS OF MEMBERS OF KNOXVILLE CHAPTER

The 1917 meeting of this Chapter was held at the lovely home of the President, Mrs. J. E. Dooley.

Mrs. Brown Ayres, (née Kate Anderson, of Lexington, Va.) wife of the President of the University of Tennessee, told of an amusing incident of her school days at M. B. S., which I think will interest other alumnæ girls. Mr. Ayres had come to call, and as he had the proper credentials, they were having a pleasant visit in the back parlor. The door bell called "Uncle Chess," whom all the old girls will remember, and he ushered two young men into the front parlor, wanting to see the Misses Woodrow, pupils there at that time. When "Uncle Chess" asked for their letters, one stated he was Mr. Thomas Woodrow Wilson, a cousin of the young ladies and a son of a former pastor of Miss Baldwin; his friend, also was the son of a minister. After what seemed a long, long time, during which Mr. Wilson suggested their having "a word of prayer" for the success of their mission, "Uncle Chess" entered the door and said, "Miss Mary Julia says, if ye aint got de papers, dar aint no use your waitin' 'case ye can't see de young ladies." So that is a record of one defeat for "Our President."

Mrs. Hattie Park-Thomas, of 6132 Kimbark Ave., Chicago, Ill., is a former M. B. S. girl who has had the rare privilege of intimate association and work with that wonderful woman, Miss Jane Addams. She went to The Hague with her on the Peace Mission, and is vitally interested in all progressive women's movements, including Woman's Suffrage. Her older sister, Mrs. Juliet Park-White, is as prominent in her home place (Knoxville) as Mrs. Thomas is in Chicago. She has been President of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church for years, and also President of the U. D. C.

Our President, Mrs. J. E. Dooley (Mary Andes, '85), has a lovely home at 1618 West Clinch St., with the latch-string on the outside, and the same way continuously. Her husband is an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church, and incidentally one of our most prominent wholesale shoe merchants.

Mrs. Clifford Prather (Minnie Newman Bell, '04) lives on one of the finest show farms in the county, on Kingston Pike. Her greatest treasure, however, is a daughter, one year of age.

Mrs. Jennie Folsom-Peck, '90, is going through deep waters at present and needs our heartiest sympathy. She, who has loved books and all things beautiful so much, has lost her sight. The well stored mind will be sweet comfort in the coming dark years.

Mrs. John Jarnigen (Lucy Tomlison) continues to live at her ancestral home, Tate Springs, Tenn.

Mrs. Bonnie Doak (Lucy Hughes) married in Virginia, and is mistress of a magnificent farm at Clifton, Va.

Emma Pate is one of biggest church workers in the old First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Pattie Getlys-Park, '92, lost her husband this last year. He, by the way, was a brother of Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. White mentioned above. She has two children.

Miss Ella Williams, '91, has regained her health, and is very happy in her work at the Holston National Bank.

Mrs. John W. Green, (Ellie McClung) is the wife of one of the most prominent lawyers of this State. She gives the most of her time to the enjoyment of her homes, a country place on Black Oak Ridge and a beautiful town home. They have no children.

Mrs. C. J. McClung (Anna Gay, of La.) married a brother of Miss Ellie McClung. He is a capitalist, and as they are without incumbrances, enjoy travelling and their country and city homes. Her neice (Anna Gay Doolittle, '11) of San Diego, Cal., is at the California University, at Berkely, and is making quite a name in athletics. Belongs to the rowing crew.

[The writer of the above, Mrs. Blanche Dempster-Moffett, '91, is as always, the one who fits in when others won't, and consequently she holds many Treasurer- and Secretaryships in different organizations.]

TO ALUMNÆ EVERYWHERE

Please answer all letters and cards concerning the Alumnæ Association promptly, and if possible comply with the request of the writer. For if some are willing to give a great deal of time and labor to the cause, aren't you going to do your part and help along by doing as you are asked, whether it is to collect news items, to assist in organizing a Chapter in your home town, or to serve as vice-president of your class, and correct addresses and get new members. Or, better still, do all of these things without being asked. Send your information to the Publication Editor, and write to the Chairman of the Membership Committee concerning the organization of a Chapter. If one of your Baldwin friends marries or moves into or away from your city, let us know.

Pay your dues promptly. If you do not, your name will be dropped from the roll; and too, we need the money. Fifty cents a year is a very small contribution for you to make, and this organization, like every other, has expenses—every cent left over will go the Scholarship or Endowment Fund.

And help with the Endowment Fund. Every Life Membership fee of $10.00 goes to the Endowment Fund. (A down payment of $10.00 entitles a member to a life membership, and no further dues are to be collected from her.)

The Publication Committee takes this opportunity to thank those members of the Association who have sent in bits of news about Baldwin girls. There are a number of mistakes in names, dates, and addresses in the Roll, and any corrections sent to the Publication Committee will be greatly appreciated.
